Winners of the Scottish and Glasgow Charity Cups

Renton, 'Champions of the World', 1888. After beating the English Cup winners, West Bromwich Albion, they then proceeded to defeat the runners-up, Preston North End, 4-2 on 2 June in a testimonial match for Queen's Park's Walter Arnot at Hampden Park. In the club's view, they saw this as justification for their claim to be called 'the World's champions'

12 May Clackmannan v Vale of Forth 2-1

In 1887, the Sauchie Colliery Band organized a successful charity badge competition. Spurred by this, clubs in the county formed the Clackmannanshire Charity FA to run a Charity Cup. Local clubs and businesses plus JB Balfour, MP all contributed to the purchase of the trophy.

Fifteen clubs entered the first contest and twelve played in the second. Soon though the numbers dropped, and by third tournament in 1890, only four teams were entering. By 1896, there were only two senior clubs left. When Clackmannan couldn't agree on a venue or date for the 'final', Alloa Athletic were awarded the trophy.

In 1901, the trophy was given to the Clackmannanshire Junior FA and was awarded to the winners of the Clackmannanshire Junior Cup.

The Glasgow FA was formed in March 1883 after the Edinburgh FA challenged the city to a challenge match. Before this, the Scottish FA organized Glasgow's representative fixtures and they saw this as a challenge to their authority, as the Edinburgh FA felt the eastern-based clubs were under-represented by the national body. After a number of years, the Glasgow FA finally organized a challenge cup competition. The first few years saw around two dozen clubs enter, and the competition was, given the calibre of clubs involved, seen as second only to the Scottish Cup. Even after the formation of the Scottish League in 1890, the Glasgow Cup was given priority over league fixtures, much to the exasperation of other clubs around the country.
